

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A vehicle door operation system for operating a first door and a second door provided to a vehicle includes a sending means, a portable station carried by a user, a receiving means, a judging means, an object 5 detecting means including an electrical capacitance sensor for detecting a human approach, an opening operation means provided to the second door, a first control means for switching the first door and the second door from a locked condition to an unlocked condition when the ID information is 10 verified as correct information by the judging means, and either an object detecting signal from the object detecting means or an opening operation signal from the opening operation means is input thereinto, and a second control means for actuating a supporting means supporting the second door relative to the vehicle to release the second door when the ID information is 15 verified as correct information by the judging means, and the opening operation signal from the opening operation means is input thereinto.